and built a refinery to extract shale oil. The 650-million-dollar investment is partly offset by a contract with the government to provide oil for defense use. Union may learn much that will help make shale viable—someday.

THERE'S A CAFE in Maybell and a gas station where you can fill up. In far northwest Colorado these are amenities not to be lightly regarded. And between Maybell and the Utah line, 62 miles on Highway 318, there's not much else.

I took that road to the northern end of Dinosaur National Monument and camped by the Green River. This is a few miles downriver from Browns Park, where Butch Cassidy and his gang sometimes hid when not robbing banks. Blessed with abundant grass, Browns Park also was a gathering place for Indians. In the late 1830s it held a small fur trading post, Fort Davis. Located in the heart of the short-lived fort stood a large pile of evidence beside the Green. He picked up charcoal, chunks of lead, and other items that trappers traded to Indians for pelts.

"I'll show you where it was," Adams offered. Soon we were slipping behind the clay of the riverbank, climbing and sliding. Glade reported the location of the

"Sometimes you can still find a bead," he said. Then, "I think I see one." A tiny bead of mud winked at us amid the gravel.

Glade slipped off his shirt and, with one arm on a rock, splashed into the water. He reached for one of the bundles was just the color of mud. It fell, went out in the distance, and I thought, "Colorado for you, a little bit of mud, a little bit of water, often just the same." [U]
